Indian Villages between Tradition and Transformation: An Empirical Investigation into the Effects of Innovation on Socio-Economic, Agricultural and ... Villages (Europäische Hochschulschriften) Anton Kohler

Technological and agricultural innovations in traditional societies cause significant socio-economic and socio-cultural changes which this study examines. It is based on an empirical investigation and careful field-research in Maharashtra. Two villages are compared as to their differences in socio-economic, agricultural and socio-cultural development. The first, traditional village is on the threshold of change from rainfed subsistence to irrigated agriculture whereas the other has had intensive irrigation for several years already.
